LEATHER LABELS

LEATHER LABELS

As Label, we provide all kinds of leather labels for fashion. A real leather label refers to a label that is made from genuine leather. Genuine leather is derived from the processing and treatment of animal hides, typically from cattle, sheep, goats, or other animals. Real leather labels are commonly used in the textile and fashion industries to provide branding, information on clothing, accessories, bags, shoes, and more. These labels offer the authentic look and feel of genuine leather, adding a touch of luxury and craftsmanship to the product. The manufacturing process of real leather labels involves cutting the leather material into the desired shape and size. The design, logo, or text can be embossed, debossed, or printed onto the label using various techniques. The edges of the label are typically finished and treated to prevent fraying and ensure durability. Real leather labels offer several advantages. They are highly durable and can withstand regular use and exposure to various environmental conditions. Genuine leather develops a unique patina over time, adding character and enhancing the label's appeal. Additionally, real leather labels are often considered a premium choice and can elevate the perceived value of a product. Real leather labels are commonly sewn onto garments or accessories, either on the inside or outside, depending on the design and purpose. They provide a tactile and visually appealing way to convey information and promote a brand.

JACRON LABELS

JACRON LABELS

A textile jacron label is a type of label used in the textile industry. It is typically made from jacron material, which is a synthetic leather-like material. The term "jacron" is often used as a generic term to refer to this type of label material, even though it may not be made from actual leather. Textile jacron labels are commonly used on denim garments, jeans, and other textile products.

They are known for their durability, flexibility, and resistance to wear and tear. These labels often feature brand names, logos, care instructions, and other relevant information about the garment or product. Jacron labels are preferred in the fashion industry for several reasons. First, they are more sustainable and animal-friendly compared to genuine leather labels. Additionally, jacron labels can be easily customized and designed with various printing techniques, such as embossing, debossing, or screen printing, allowing for unique branding opportunities. They also provide a premium and stylish look to the garments, enhancing the overall aesthetic appeal. In summary, a textile jacron label is a synthetic leather-like label often used in the textile industry, particularly in denim and jeans products. It offers durability, customization options, and a high-quality appearance, making it a popular choice for branding and information purposes.

WOVEN LABELS

WOVEN LABELS

A woven label refers to a type of label that is made by weaving threads together to create a design or text. It is commonly used in the textile industry to provide branding, size information, or other relevant details on clothing, accessories, or other textile products.

Woven labels are typically made from polyester. The threads used in the weaving process can be various colors to create the desired design or text. The weaving technique allows for intricate patterns, logos, or text to be created with high detail and precision. The process of creating woven labels involves using a loom or specialized weaving machinery. The threads are interlaced to form the desired design, and the label is then cut to the desired shape and size. The edges of woven labels are usually heat-sealed or folded to prevent fraying.

Woven labels offer several advantages. They are durable and can withstand regular washing and general wear and tear, making them suitable for long-lasting use on clothing and other textile products. The woven design is often considered to be more luxurious and professional-looking compared to printed labels.

Woven labels are commonly sewn onto garments or accessories, either on the inside or outside, depending on the intended design and purpose. They provide a tactile and visually appealing way to convey information and promote a brand.

In summary, woven labels are created by weaving threads together to form a design or text. They offer durability, high detail, and a professional appearance, making them a popular choice for labeling textile products.

FABRIC LABELS

PRINTED FABRIC LABELS

A printed fabric label refers to a label that is made from fabric and features a printed design or information. It is commonly used in the textile industry to provide branding, care instructions, size information, or other relevant details on clothing, accessories, or other textile products. Printed fabric labels can be made from various types of fabrics, such as cotton, polyester, satin, or a combination of materials. The printing technique used can vary, including screen printing, heat transfer printing, digital printing, or other methods depending on the complexity of the design and the desired outcome. The design or information is printed directly onto the fabric label using ink or dye. This allows for customization and flexibility in creating labels that reflect a brand's logo, name, or other design elements. Care instructions, fiber content, country of origin, and other relevant details can also be included in the printed design. Fabric labels provide several advantages over other types of labels. They are soft, comfortable, and often more durable compared to paper or plastic labels. They can withstand regular washing and general wear and tear, making them suitable for long-lasting use on clothing and other textile products. In summary, Printed fabric labels offer a practical and customizable solution for conveying information and promoting a brand on textile products. They combine the benefits of fabric's comfort and durability with the flexibility of printing techniques to create visually appealing and informative labels
